

On the question of how many new homes, including conversions, should be built in the next 15 years, 31.4% of the respondents said none, with 17.3% choosing 1 to 25 new homes, and 23.0% choosing 26 to 50 homes. Figure 4 shows the full breakdown of responses.

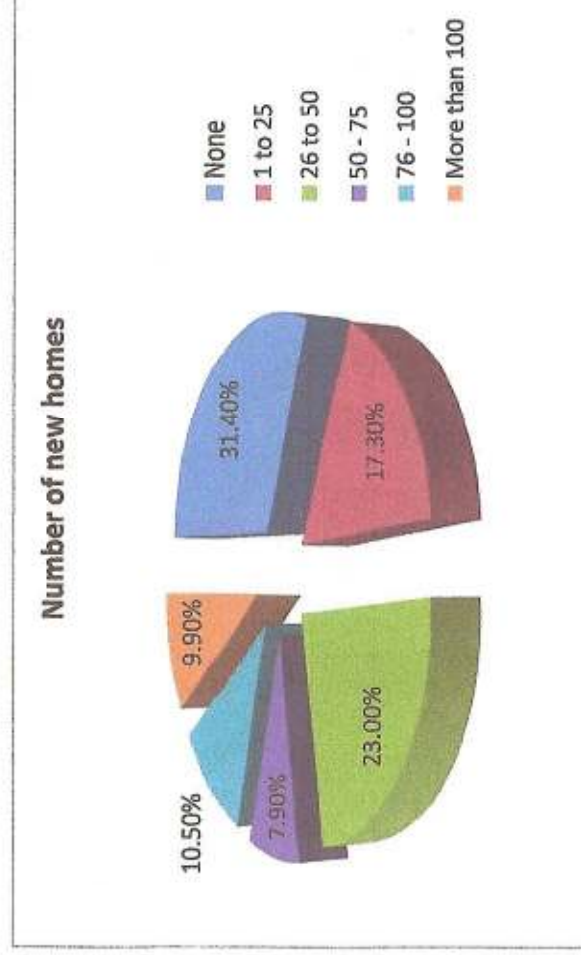

Figure 4: % responses for how many new homes should be built over the next 15 years.

In addition 168 responses were received on the maximum number of houses that should be in any one scheme. These are summarised in the table below:

Number of houses per scheme	Number of respondents
1	1
2	1
3	1
4	3
5	8
6	4
8	2
10	42
12	2
15	14
20	32
25	20
30	10
40	2
50	12
75	1
100	3

Of those who responded to this question 77% selected the number of houses per scheme as 25 or less, with 25% of responses to this question stating a maximum of 10 houses per scheme.

This area may need further work to clarify if there are differences expressed when the type of housing is also compared. This questionnaire does not provide sufficient data to do this.

When analysing the housing questions by age, there are a few interesting figures: