

47.6% of respondents, with just 24.0% disagreeing. This also correlated across the data when it was analysed by the different age ranges. Figure 6 shows responses to the types of business development that respondents would least like to see.

What is interesting is that the number of people who answered the question about the type of business development that would benefit the town, or they would most like, decreased for the type of business development that respondents would least like to see, in some cases by as many as 90 responses.

This is perhaps an indication that respondents favour business development, but could also be more simply put down to people feeling they are answering the same question three times.

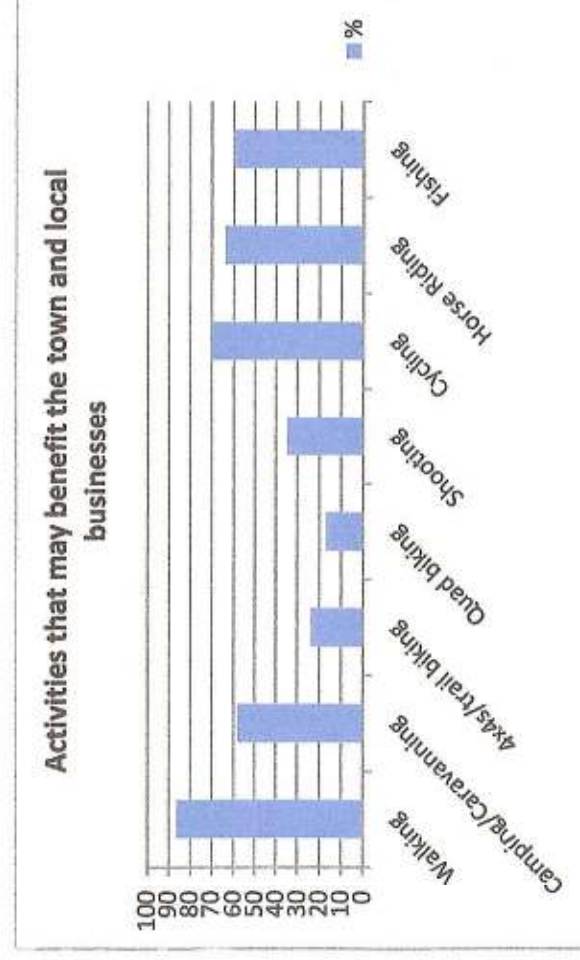

Figure 7: Activities that might be of benefit to the town and local businesses

There was broad support for promotion of activities that could benefit the town and local businesses, the exceptions being 4x4s/trail biking and quad biking. Respondents were able to select as many of these as they wished. Thirty additional comments were made that suggest a variety of similar activities including:
